Culture—While much has been written about the growing of azaleas we try here briefly to give some rules that must be followed to have success. The first thing is to unpack and plant as quickly as you can on arriving from nursery. If in late spring shading for a few days will give them time to recover from shock of moving. Generally speaking all azaleas like soil on the acid side about 6 p. h. Using about  $\frac{1}{4}$  pound of Aluminum Sulphur square yard will take care of this. They like full sun but will take to part shade. As they are top rooting plants mulching is a must. Peat, sawdust or leaves make a good mulch. While most will stand zero or better a wind break will help at least their first winter. Keep moist at all times but not wet. Give good drainage as they do not like to have wet feet. Never plant under large trees or where there is a drip from roof as this will rot buds and burn foliage. Feed once a year doing this in May. Any good fertilizer prepared for acid loving plants will do.
